Crack.Raise.Data.Recovery.for.XFS.5.0 gstarcad Q: Why does $L^2([0,1]) \setminus L^2_0([0,1])$ have infinite Lebesgue measure?

I've heard that the space of square integrable functions, except functions in $L^2_0([0,1])$, has infinite Lebesgue measure. But why is that? In $L^2_0([0,1])$, f is integrable iff $\int_0^1 |f|^2 dx < \infty$. Thus it suffices to show that, for all n , $\int_0^1 |f|^2 dx \geq n$ for all $f \in$

$L^2([0,1]) \setminus L^2_0([0,1])$. But we can assume f to be continuously differentiable (otherwise, we can approximate it by a continuous differentiable function, say g). Then, if μ is Lebesgue measure, μ

$\mu(|f|>n) = \int_0^1 |f|^2 I_{\{|f|>n\}} = \int_0^1 |f|^2 I_{\{|f| \geq$

$n\}} + \int_0^1 |f|^2 I_{\{|f|>n\}}$ I am stuck at this point. Any hints? A:

Hint: L^2_0 is the space
