important role. In order to achieve this, the enterprise use a unique software development kit (SDK), which is related to the program designed for using. When you use Pervasive database to connect with the server, you are using the same SDK as the server. Pervasive database services can be used for different information systems, the details about the system and the database to use will be recorded in a license file. And there are different types of license file that correspond to the different systems. Database users need to update the license file when they are using the license file. It will help the developer to be sure about the software. It also can upgrade the database to the next version. But after the update, it may cause data inconsistency. We should avoid this problem. Pervasive users have to update the license file in advance to solve this problem. Pervasive provides database users with a way to export the license file to save your data. You can save the license file in any format you want. You can be the backup program to save the data. If you want to restore the data in the license file, you need to select the format and the server of the database to import the license file. The data of the database should be in a database
