It looks like you're trying to download a commercial plugin not a public user plugin file. If you have time please try a trial version of SketchUp first. If you like SketchUp you will like SketchUp Pro. If you have never used SketchUp pro you can download a free 30-day SketchUp trial here: If you are new to SketchUp, or already a SketchUp Pro user, you can buy a license of SketchUp Pro for $249, and get free updates for one year. You can buy a yearly or monthly license. Go to to buy a license, or learn more about SketchUp. Once you have made your purchase, you will need to install the new version of SketchUp onto your computer. The install will create a new folder in your Downloads folder. Once you are comfortable with SketchUp, and you want the new plugins you will use, consider buying SketchUp Pro for $249. This will allow you to use these plugins. You will be able to use the same plugins that SketchUp Pro and all of the free plugins can use (they all work on the free version of SketchUp). Hope this helps. Addition: If you need a place to post your questions, this board seems to be where you are searching for answers. SketchUp Sites are user forums for users of SketchUp. You will find tutorials, books, videos, tips and tricks. SketchUp sites are good places to ask questions. You may need to post a question about the site first, though. Your question might be that you don't know how to ask the question, so you are reading something and then simply saying "I don't understand it", without giving further information. You might not be saying that you don't understand it, but that you don't understand how to ask the question. In those cases, it is helpful to post more information about your question. If it is more than just "I don't understand", post the question and then also post what you don't understand. That will help others who read the question and also help the site staff. Posting as much information as possible, in a complete and understandable way, is the best way to get the most help and the quickest response. I'm A Celebrity is facing a fresh round of

There are real concerns. "Gag rules" is what they have been called. The laws have been introduced and, if they become law, it is what everyone assumes they will be called. Everyone, that is, except for the one person who coined the term. Alison Redford introduced the "Fair Workplaces, Better Jobs Act" as a "bill-in-council". That is, it is legislation that will become law without going to a vote in Parliament. The bill has been talked about in Parliament and written about in the media. There have been a number of blogs and tweets. But until today. And what will we talk about? That's what we get for expecting something for nothing. Using the term "gag rule" I got my own tweet and an angry email from someone who thought I had insulted a friend. Crazy, right? Well, not quite. Bill C-377 is legislation that makes it illegal to ask someone to refrain from expressing his or her 3ef4e8ef8d
