softwareQ: Use of generic type on class object Why the line of code `Class cls = Class.forName("foo");` can use object of type `Class`? Do I miss something? A: `Class cls = Class.forName("foo");` is equivalent to `Class cls = Class.forName("foo");` For `Class`>, `Object` may be a valid generic type argument. If you make this a `Class`, you must provide at least one other generic parameter. Note that the resulting `Class` object isn't a generic type (just because it's a type parameter for a generic type) and may not implement all of the methods of generic classes like `List`. It's just a non-generic `Object`, which I think is what you meant by the question. From the JLS 5
