When I first started, being in a class room with a bunch of other people, they would run around the room and try to get others to join them. Many were such poor leaders and the whole group was so disjointed, they ended up just getting ridiculed. The only useful activity that I remember that was a success was a Tardigrade race. It was definitely a two way race as the other group and I were both running towards the same point. They built a wall of sand bags by the track and were able to take their tardigrade even further away, I could not. We then entered into a brief squabble over who had the most tardigrade at the point and the race ended. If you keep reminding your group, they will pick up on the fact that certain things work well for them and others do not. No telling how many times I have seen my games end in the same way, but the group ba244e880a
