A phytochemical investigation of Corydalis bulbosa (Papaveraceae) yielded seven new monoterpenoid indole alkaloids, named corybulbosine F-1 (1-7), and two known monoterpenoid indole alkaloids, 6-hydroxyluteolin and desoxo-shasangine (8-9). Their structures were elucidated based on spectroscopic analysis and chemical evidence. The isolated alkaloids were tested for their potential neuroprotective effects on neurodegenerative diseases in vitro, using H₂O₂-induced PC12 cell death and α -synuclein/STIM1/Orai1 aggregation. Corybulbosine F (3), desoxo-shasangine (9), 6-hydroxyluteolin, and shasangine (8) showed significant activity at 10 μ M, comparable to
