If you have been following our coverage on the Dell XPS 13, and are curious about the device, today is probably the day to check out this laptop. Dell's latest PC-

based laptop goes on sale in the US and comes with a price tag of $999. The XPS 13 is currently ranked as the number one laptop on Amazon and comes with an excellent design as well as some great specs. The Dell XPS 13's design actually reminds me of the ZBook family of notebooks that Lenovo has made over the past several years. The difference is the XPS 13 has a metal chassis while the ZBooks have aluminum bodies. That being said, the XPS 13's metal body is dark grey and made out of anodized aluminum while the ZBook's aluminum was a silver color and slightly more plastic-like in design. The base of the XPS 13 has a slight hexagonal pattern on the bottom with a couple of small speaker grills and one of those small triangular plate that Dell calls the "lip." There is a shiny circular strip between the speaker grill on the laptop that resembles a fingerprint sensor, but instead of a fingerprint reader, this is a camera that
