kill - aim for a special location on the ground to kill the target in a special way, example of special kill: if the target has a gun which the player shoots, a shell will be killed instantly, the shell will not explode and the player will not get a secondary effect. when you have mastered the basic skills you can move to the next levels. if you finished all classes you will be able to fill all skills. this is not much different from a regular game but still fun to achieve. to move to the next level you need to obtain one achievement point after another. most of the achievements are very easy to obtain and can be completely ignored or completely ignored. those that are not easy, you can reach by a combination of an intermediate level and a class. class determines the skills available or the special abilities of the character. to get a level is always a bit easier and more interesting than in the same game. depending on the character class you have, it is determined in which game type you should be looking at at a particular level. in general it is a good idea to gain the lower level first. you can easily ignore the higher levels and level up the same character instead. that way, you can utilize the character that you made in the lower levels for that game and possibly change some of the characters by leveling them up in addition to the game. this is the best way to completely ruin the game if youre not careful with the character. with abilities of heroes, one example is the possibilities to easily climb up a wall, you can gain a lot of xp from it if you shoot a bunch of places at it. higher levels are generally more useful in that more abilities become available, while lower levels are more for fun.
